PURDUE TRUSTEES RATIFY 3 DISTINGUISHED PROFESSORS, APPROVE OFFICE OF RESEARCH AND PARTNERSHIPS, AND RECOGNIZE DONORS

Paul Shepson is a recognized national and international leader in atmospheric chemistry. He is a leading figure in the field of Arctic chemistry and climate change and is known for employing aircraft-based measurements of emission rates of greenhouse gases. He has published 169 peer-reviewed journal articles and has raised more than $16 million in federal funding to support his research group, which has been cited in other publications more than 8,700 times.

In addition to his scholarly work, Shepson has mentored nearly 40 successful graduate students, and he currently works with a group of 10 graduate students and two postdoctoral researchers.

The board also approved a resolution of appreciation for those who have donated $1 million or more to Purdue. "Schlumberger Information Systems donated $3.13 million in software licenses to the Department of Earth, Atmospheric and Planetary Sciences in the College of Science.
